1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schotthoefer et al. in view of Meyer, Mosher and Lavitt.

Schotthoefer et al. teach air bag apparatus which uses a gas generating material, disclosed on col. 4, lines 11-18, single base nitrocellulose propellant at line 13. However, this does not teach the specifics of such propellant, specifically the stabilizer. In view of Meyer, it would have been obvious to us the conventional single base propellant which does include stabilizers, at pages 132, 247-248, and especially 238. The single base powder of Schotthoefer et al. thus would have included stabilizer, but there is no teaching of the amount. Mosher (col. 3, lines 13-18) and Lavitt (at the end of the Abstract, for example) teach that the amount of stabilizer may be up to 5%. Variation of the amount of stabilizer, and use of a small amount of other notoriously well known minor additives, if necessary, would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art. It is well settled that optimizing a result effective variable is well within the expected ability of a person of ordinary skill in the subject art. In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980), In re Aller, 220 F.2d 454, 105 USPQ 233 (CCPA 1955). While this is certainly the case, this is particularly the case where, as here, the claims are unlimited as to additional ingredients in the gas generating composition by the use of the broad scope term "comprising."

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. In particular, Williams et al. and Cartwright are supplemental about nitrocellulose propellants including for air bag use. Avory et al. at col. 8, lines 49-64 is supplemental to Schotthoefer et al. in teaching the use of single base smokeless powder (nitrocellulose) in air bag devices at the propellant, as is Hamilton et al. (note claims 31, 41, 71 and 81, for example.)
